The Chinook of yesterday has settled the snow of Monday last, when about 4 inches fell in the storm which lasted best part of the day. Farmers say the side roads are drifted and some of the school vans are on sleighs. The moisture is most welcome as it will mean some run off for the sloughs and dams which are dry.

Dear Friends:

I just received your very acceptable parcel today and wish to say thanks, thank a million for sending it. It was a little over two months on the way but none the worse for it. Everything was in good condition.

Whenever any parcels arrive in the billet every one helps eat it so some time when we're all here we will sample some of "Chinook's" cheer. Believe me, the boys do appreciate everything sent them from home. It is should say, a rare bit of Canada coming to us here from you over there. Thanks again Lots of luck

Yours sincerely

Death Of Robert Gardner

The news of the passing of Robert Gardner, late president of the U.F.A., was a great shock to the residents of Chinook and district, he having been a resident of Excel since the early days of settlement. He also was a member of the first Municipal Council of Golden Centre and was elected as Reeve at its first meeting. Later was elected as Member for Medicine Hat in the Dominion Parliament in 1920 he continued to represent Acadia Constituency until 1935 when he was defeated. Mr. Gardner will long be remembered for his services in the interests of farmers of Western Canada.

A Good Plan

The wheat stem sawfly probably qualifies as the most serious controllable hazard in successful wheat production in the Prairie Provinces. We say "controllable" because, thanks to the admirable work of our entomologists, we know that losses may be very greatly reduced.

The defeat of wheat stem sawfly was achieved almost entirely by agricultural research. The farmer had only to purchase seed of rust-resistant varieties. The wheat stem sawfly problem, at present, is different because control measures involve modifications of farm practice, and the farmer himself, in co-operation with his neighbours and with technical advisors, must do the job.

The Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture is, this year, embarking on an aggressive control campaign in the southern part of that province. New fieldmen have been appointed and they will work under the advice of Dominion Government entomologists and Experimental Farm personnel. If the farmers give this programme full support, it will succeed. If they don't, it will fail.

We gladly dedicate this to the Saskatchewan sawfly control programme despite the fact that many of our readers are not actually involved. The same kind of organization would be helpful in the control of the grasshopper, which infested in Manitoba, the control of leafy spurge is well under way as the direct result of an essentially similar plan.

This sort of work brings farmers, government officials and scientific agriculturists closer together: a much to be desired and long overdue state of affairs.

The Control Of Germany

DURING TROUBLED TIMES such as these in which we are living today, it is natural for people to think much of the future, and to hope that when peace and order are restored again, it will be for all time, not just for an interval between wars. At present there is evidence of deep public interest in plans for an international peace organization and in proposals for making certain that Germany will not regain the power to attempt for a third time conquests such as she started in 1914 and again in 1938. Any official plans which the leaders of the Allied nations may have made for dealing with Germany after the war are, of course, not known to the public, but it is considered probable that this subject was discussed at the conferences at Quebec, and at Dumbarton Oaks.

Many Proposals Are Advanced

Because there has been no announcement regarding an Allied agreement for dealing with Germany, concern has been expressed in some quarters that a sudden collapse of the enemy's strength is being advanced for impeding terms on Germany, which would most likely lead to lasting peace. These proposals deal with many aspects of the question but one point which is emphasized in all of them, is that some way must be found to keep the Germans from again building up a powerful war machine. This would involve either destroying, or maintaining strict control over what are called the "heavy industries", which include those producing oil, metal goods and chemicals. Suggested methods of accomplishing this are numerous. There are some who believe that Germany should be stripped of all her industries and be converted to an agricultural country. Dr. James B. Conant, President of Harvard University, advocates the total liquidation of Germany's heavy industry, "even if these measures require a re-orientation of the economic balance of the world."

Others are of the opinion that such drastic measures would cause hardship throughout Europe because of the economic complications, and that it would be preferable to allow the industries to remain, but with strict Allied control to prevent them being used for the production of war material. Because of the ingenuity with which Germans can devise new materials and processes, it is realized that the task of preventing them from re-armament will have to be carried out with great thoroughness. One method, suggested by American technical experts, is to prohibit large electric power plants within Germany, but to supply industries there with power from neighboring countries, making it possible to cut them off should they not be used for purely peaceful purposes. Whatever means may be decided upon, it is to be hoped that they will prove effective in preventing Germany from starting a Third World War a few years from now.

Must Prevent Further War

Because of the ingenuity with which Germans can devise new materials and processes, it is realized that the task of preventing them from re-armament will have to be carried out with great thoroughness. One method, suggested by American technical experts, is to prohibit large electric power plants within Germany, but to supply industries there with power from neighboring countries, making it possible to cut them off should they not be used for purely peaceful purposes. Whatever means may be decided upon, it is to be hoped that they will prove effective in preventing Germany from starting a Third World War a few years from now.

Building Helicopter

New Westminster Men Expect To Make Trial Flight Soon

Several men at New Westminster, British Columbia, are building a "flying windmill" of their own design which is of a more modern helicopter type.

It obtains both life and forward action from two counter-rotating propellers mounted over the fuse plane.

The rudder and elevators control the direction of the craft, and power is supplied by a V-8 automobile engine.

Lacking priority rating, the builders had to scrounge junk yards and auto wrecks. The inventors are expecting to make a trial flight soon. If successful, it will be the first workable helicopter to be built in Canada.

SMILE AWHILE

Judge—Your conscience must be as black as your hair.

Convict—Well, you're bald.

She: "Do you love me for myself alone?"

He: "Yes, and when we're married I don't want any of the family thrown in."

Sylvia—When I applied for a job the manager had the nerve to ask if my punctuation was good.

Mildred—What did you tell him?

Sylvia—I said I'd never been late for work in my life.

"Please can you tell me why the tide is not up this morning?" asked the little girl at the seashore.

Yes, please," replied the old fisherman. "It's because it was last night."

One morning a Negro janitor came to work with a black eye, a swollen lip and other bruises:

Boss—What happened to you, Bill?

Negro—Well, Boss, I was talkin' when I should have been listenin'.

Visitor (to Junior): "My, what a good boy you are, sitting there so quietly!"

Junior: "I always sit quietly until someone puts money in my bank and then I say 'Thank you'."

Manager—Do you think you know enough to be useful in this office? Office Boy—Know enough? Why, I left my last place because the boss said I knew too much.

The old man had watched the mortal working in vain on his car for about an hour.

"What are you gazing at?" asked the late motorist. "Is this the first motor car you have ever seen?"

"No," was the dry reply, "but it's much like it!"

von Rundstedt's Portgait Hangs In Field Marshal Montgomery's Quarters

Von Rundstedt's picture has joined that of Rommel in Field Marshal Montgomery's personal pictorial hall of fame.

"I used to think Rommel was good," Field Marshal Montgomery told reporters. "But von Rundstedt could knock him for six. He (von Rundstedt) is the best general I've come up against in this war. I've got his picture up on the wall of my room across from Rommel's."

Field Marshal Montgomery's habit of keeping a picture of Field Marshal Rommel always before him has been famous since the North African campaign. Rommel was fatally wounded last summer in Normandy.

The Royal Bank of Canada Annual Meeting

Morris W. Wilson, President, says continued Canadian development depends on world-wide system of trading based on international monetary and exchange stability. Urges Canada to be one of first to approve principles of Bretton Woods Conference.

Sydney G. Dobson, Vice-President and General Manager, reports total assets at all-time peak with year's increase greatest in history of bank; southern branches in unique position to facilitate Latin-American trade.

The vital importance to Canada's future welfare of a healthy foreign trade based on international monetary and exchange stability was emphasized by Morris W. Wilson, President of The Royal Bank of Canada at the bank's Annual Meeting.

Canada owed her economic development from earliest days, said Mr. Wilson, to foreign trade and the level of imports and exports made available to her by munitions after the war, but actually expanded, possibly to double their pre-war value, if Canada was to secure an adequate national income.

FOREIGN TRADE PROBLEMS
"Nationally we export considerably more to Great Britain and other countries than we import from them. On the other hand our imports from the United States are usually in excess of our exports to that country. Under normal circumstances, it was relatively simple to adjust this balance."

Our sterling balances, accumulated through exports to the Empire, were readily exchangeable for U.S. dollars with which to pay for our purchases.

"During experience, however, has shown the difficulties which arise when this multilateral adjustment of trade balances breaks down. As a result of the war, the United Kingdom had suffered devastating destruction of their industrial machinery and particularly Great Britain and Australia had lost their industries.

Other countries, notably those of North America, had found their industries greatly expanded. "In order to maintain employment," said Mr. Wilson, "we must take into account the fact that for these countries and particularly for Canada, to export to an extent greater than was necessary even before 1939."

BRETTON WOODS

Mr. Wilson dealt at length with the new developments in the field of international finance, particularly the new dollar standard, a self-sufficient system of international control of foreign exchange and investment with a view to providing exchange stability. He readily admitted that the new dollar standard was not necessarily the best, but he pointed out that practical businessmen were largely in agreement with the new system.

Mr. Wilson recommended a bilateral Trade Convention for all countries to provide for the resumption of trade with the United States, create an anomalous situation, and obscure our true position in the eyes of many.

Because of these factors, and our own selfish interests, we are compelled to prefer a world-wide system of trading. There is no altruism about it.

CANNOT STAND ALONE

"International trade on the broadest scale is not a luxury but a necessity which can be independently preserved for her foreign markets? There are certainly obvious measures, notably maintenance and improvement of our communications, the ability to defend ourselves, the acceptance of imports from countries to whom we export, up to the limit either of their capacity to do so, to us, or our ability to absorb them. We must also, if we are to remain competitive, have new principles which Canada can and should adopt, whatever the rest of the world may do."

"What other alternatives will be normally available to us? In the first place, we might have to rely on our experts to the ability of foreign markets to pay for our products. Since many of our major export commodities are produced on a scale well above all proportion to our own capacity to produce them, we must develop our foreign trade, and especially our export trade. Monetary stability is one of the prerequisites of international trade. For Canada, monetary stability is of paramount importance. If we acknowledge these principles, our course of action is clear. We must implement the measures necessary to see that the new dollar standard is not a hindrance to the resumption of general trade. Canadian commerce, in particular, must be based on a standard of monetary stability which is of paramount importance. If we acknowledge these principles, our course of action is clear. OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

"SIDE-TRACK"

Centreville frankly to get a husband. It was her home town, but she had not seen it since she was six. Now, with no money except the three hundred dollars in her purse, she presented the world's best reason why small town girl goes home from big city.

The last three years had been telling. First, the concern for which she had worked had failed. Then had followed a long succession of jobs—part time—finally, no job at all. In deed, to her mind, marriage seemed the only steady position.

On the train she kept turning over Aunt Agatha's remarks about Centreville. "If ever you go back," she had said, "remember it's the Pembertons who have all the money. They head the bank and practically everything else. Leonard Pemberton must be just about your age now."

As the train pulled in at the grubby little station, Millicent sighed. But the town itself was pretty. Every family had flower beds, even if they couldn't afford new paint for their houses. The hotel was reasonable and clean. She was, she decided, going to like Centreville, after all.

"The first thing I'll do," she resolved, "is drop in at the bank. Open an account. Then, quite casually, I'll ask to see Mr. Leonard Pemberton. After all, the Pembertons were family friends."

The bank teller was alert and friendly. When she gave her name, he exclaimed, "Don't tell me you're Millie Wayne?" I'm Leonard Pemberton." He held out a hand. "Why, when you were knee-high to a grass hopper, we used to play cowboy and Indian together. You were always the Indian," he added.

Millicent laughed. "I'm afraid I haven't many memories of Centreville."

"Well, let's refresh them," he said. "How about dinner tonight?"

Millicent smiled. "All right," she told him.

They went to Ivy Hill Inn and danced to the soothing rhythm of a small but delightful band. All during dinner, Millicent kept staring at Leonard. He was tall, powerfully built, with a likable personality. If this was the way they made them in Centreville, what in the world had she been doing in New York?

On the way back to town, Len said, "I want you to meet my folks," and, suddenly, Millicent felt a little lump of remorse. She glanced at Len quickly to see if he had divined her thoughts, but he was still staring unconcernedly ahead.

"I'd love to," she said. "Only I'd rather wait a while. I still feel a little out of things."

Leonard laughed. "Oh, you'll get over it. My folks will be there. Nothing put on about them. But I don't want to rush you."

Millicent saw a good deal of Leonard in the two weeks that followed. He was so natural, so unaffected for man with money that she just couldn't help liking him. She looked forward to his visits, and evenings when the press of other affairs kept him away, she felt desolate.

It was at the beginning of the third week that they invited him to the Riverside Country Club to attend the golf tournament. Going home, Leonard said, "Well, young lady, this time I won't take no for an answer. You're coming to my house for dinner tonight. Mom's expecting you."

"Leonard," said Millicent suddenly, "I think I ought to tell you—I stopped."

"You don't have to tell me a thing," he returned. "If you have a boy friend at home—well, I only hope I can make you forget him. All's fair in love and war, you know."

And Millicent, reading what she saw in his eyes, said nothing more.

They turned into a side street lined with massive elm trees. It wasn't an impressive street, nor was the house before which they stopped. "Well, here we are," said Len cheerfully. "That's Dad just coming out of the garage."

The older man put an arm around Millicent. "Well, bless my soul if you aren't the living image of your mother, Caroline," he called, "here's little Millie."

A cheery, round little woman in a gingham apron came out on the back porch. "Land sakes," she said, "how you've grown! I always remember you as a prim little shaver with an inquisitive tongue in your head." Millicent laughed in spite of herself. "And now, if you'll excuse me, I've got to get the pie out of the oven. You folks sit on the porch. I'll call you when supper's ready."

The cool of the evening was coming to them fanned by the leaves of the elm trees. Millicent leaned back in her rocking chair. Centreville certainly was nice. "You know," she abruptly addressed Len's father, "I always thought you Pembertons lived on Sunrise Boulevard."

He laughed. "Sunrise Boulevard? Why, no. That's where the other Pembertons live. You know, the ones who have the bank?"

Millicent stared at him. "But Leonard—" she managed to say.

Len grimaced. "Oh, I'm just working for a living, per. I suppose I wouldn't be smiling if that dad hadn't named me for Christopher Pemberton's only son."

Millicent sat up with a sharp intake of breath. "Then my mother—didn't she know the Christopher Pemberton?"

The elder man was thoughtful. "Just on sight, I guess. We folks on this side of town never did know much about those on the other."

From the back of the house a voice called, "Supper's ready!"

Len reached for Millicent's hand. "I told you Mom and Dad were swell people," he said.

"There never were better," smiled Millicent. For in that moment she knew she had picked the right Pemberton.

The Canadian Rockies

Jasper National Park Preparing For Summer Visitors

When summer visitors begin going back to the Canadian Rockies after the war they will find Jasper National Park all ready for them, according to Major J. A. Wood, park superintendent, interviewed in Montreal.

For the past two summers and during the present winter, Dr. McIver Cowan, University of British Columbia biologist, has been making a wild life survey of the sanctuary which extends over 4,200 square miles. Major Wood said. He has been locating summer and winter ranges and, according to his finds, the animals are very healthy and there has been no falling off in numbers. There has been a tremendous increase in elk, while moose, mule deer, mountain sheep and goats, black bears and the smaller animals are to be found in the park in great numbers.

"Few of the bears actually came into town this past year," the superintendent said. "We had plenty of these visitors looking for handouts the year before, but the latest berry crop was good. The deer are as tame as ever, but we have had some to take the place of 'Old Jasper.' He was the pet of all the children who used to hang affectionately around his neck and tie the ribbons to his horns. He met all the trains and made straight for the dining cars where the crews always had something for him. 'Old Jasper' was a familiar figure in the streets of the town for five or six years. He died in the winter of 1940."

Fishing conditions in Jasper are better than ever before, Major Wood reported. Rainbow trout eggs were collected in the spring and eastern brook trout eggs in the fall. Some Great Lake trout were also cultivated and the fish were raised in a hatchery and the fish were fed with "Miracle" Hatchery Mash.

"Salt water fish are rich in iodine. This mineral, though needed in minute quantities, is important for it helps to prevent simple goiter which is often prevalent in inland districts."

"Sea foods are one of the few food sources of vitamin D, the sun-shine vitamin."

"Clams are especially noted as a good source of calcium and salmon of the B-complex vitamins."

Modern methods of preservation and transportation have introduced many new varieties of salt water fish to Canadians who live a thousand miles or more from the sea. Even with the war-imposed limitations on processing and transportation for civilian consumption, most larger centers offer a choice of saltwater fish the year around and there is variety for menus and good nutrition to be found at the fish counter.

In answer to a question about skiing in the park, Major Wood said that the Jasper Ski Club had been reorganized and that with the assistance of the volunteer workers were developing Whistler Mountain, near Jasper Park Lodge. "They have a good layout," he said, "and Whistler Mountain will be a big asset to Jasper as a winter sports area."

Watchers are on duty at all times.

The roads and trails are in good condition, he said. No new trails have been opened up during the war, except the one-way secondary roads to facilitate the transport of supplies and equipment to the fire rangers.

"We had no fires last summer as with certain improvements, we have perfect coverage of the park. Areas overlap and lookout towers are connected by telephone. We are establishing meteorological stations at strategic points so that we may know of conditions at all times and adjust our organization accordingly. Watchers are on duty at all times," he declared.

HERE'S THE ANSWER...

One sure way to save baby chicks is to put the best of the necessary food materials inside the hatching egg. Naturally the only way to do this is through the shell. So feed your laying hen "Miracle" Hatching Mash at least two months before you collect the egg for the incubator.

"Miracle" Hatching Mash is tested to give you laying hens perfectly balanced food value. If you have plenty of farm grains, mix your own feed with "Miracle" Hatching Mash Supplement.

Fish Are Rich In Value For Body Building

Science believes the old belief that "fish feeds the brain" though perhaps it might be more said that "brain feeds on fish."

The Nutrition Division at Ottawa has this to say about the food value of fish:

"As a protein or body building food, fish and other sea foods, like oysters and clams, are just as valuable as meat."

Took On Big Job

Corporal With American Unit Accounted For Forty Germans

Rooftop Willie will be to the name of this one-man air force without a plane. His bombs were hand grenades and his targets were German houses in the houses beneath him.

He was just one of the many unidentified heroes of this war. All they know is that Willie was a corporal, part of a unit of 120 infantrymen and about 60 tankmen cut off for three days in a village near the German border by the sudden Nazi counter-offensive.

For 72 bloody hours they fought off an entire German regiment which penetrated into the narrow alleys of the village.

They chopped through buildings to chase the Germans, they rescued their wounded with tanks and they piled up so many German dead in the streets they had to hurdle the bodies in order to retreat.

Willie took on the job of clearing Germans from one of the houses being occupied next door to the doghouse.

He climbed to the icy roof of a two-story gabled house in which the Germans were held up, slid down to the front edge and laid his rifle over the gutter.

Then he fired two shots toward the front door as a teaser. Four Germans slipped out to see what was on. Willie pulled the pin from a grenade, squinted over the roof edge for better aim and dropped it.

He hit the jackpot and the four Germans qualified for posthumous Iron Crosses.

Willie grinned as he crept back behind a gable and took another grenade from his pocket. In a moment a patrol of five Germans came out of the house. His aim was true again.

Willie's "mission" lasted nearly an hour despite the bullets of snipers who had spotted his bombing platform. When his pockets were empty down, 40 dead Germans were piled in front of the door.

DO THIS! To relieve discomforts, one of the best things you can do is put a good spoonful of home-tempered Vicks Vaporub on a cloth and boil water.

Then feel welcome relief come as you apply the cloth, soaking medicated vapors that penetrate to the cold-congested nose.

This relieves nasal irritation, quietes coughing, and helps clear the head—bringing great comfort.

FOR MATURED COLD: To throat, chest and back with Vicks Vaporub at bedtime. Vicks Vaporub works for what's wrong at once—bring relief.

Remember, it's Vicks Vaporub.

Trans-Canada Air Lines

Extensive Post-War Planning To Improve Service

Trans-Canada Air Lines is presently engaged in extensive post-war planning and among the important matters being discussed is the DC-4M aircraft which will be used on T.C.A. lines.

The DC-4M has been modified from the basic DC-4 type to meet specific operation conditions. T.C.A. has built a 17-foot wooden mock-up of the nose-section of the DC-4M with flight instruments, radio facilities, etc., designated in their places. The DC-4M has four Rolls-Royce Merlin-type engines and will accommodate 44 passengers on its day planes and 22 passengers on its sleeper planes for the Trans-Atlantic service.
